Socio-Historical Examination of Religion and Ministry (SHERM Journal) is a biannual (not-for-profit) peer-reviewed academic journal that publishes the latest social-scientific, historiographic, and ecclesiastic research on religious institutions and their ministerial practices. SHERM is dedicated to the critical and scholarly inquiry of historical and contemporary religious phenomena, both from within particular religious traditions and across cultural boundaries, so as to inform the broader socio-historical analysis of religion and its related fields of study.

The purpose of SHERM Journal is to provide a scholarly medium for the social-scientific study of religion where specialists can publish advanced studies on religious trends, theologies, rituals, philosophies, socio-political influences, or experimental and applied ministry research in the hopes of generating enthusiasm for the vocational and academic study of religion while fostering collegiality among religion specialists. Its mission is to provide academics, professionals, and nonspecialists with critical reflections and evidence-based insights into the socio-historical study of religion and, where appropriate, its implications for ministry and expressions of religiosity.

Editorial Advisory Board

SHERM journal is a division of the non-profit organization, the FaithX Project, and therefore receives endowments from FaithX to maintain a significant presence within academia and the broader faith community. Nonetheless, the journal is overseen by an independent, religiously unaffiliated Editorial Advisory Board to ensure the content of the published articles meet stringent standards of critical scholarship uninfluenced by theological or ideological allegiances.

Copyright Privileges

When publishing an article through SHERM, authors are able to retain copyright privileges over their research. As part of the rights agreement, however, all authors wishing to publish their research through SHERM must transfer exclusive licensing rights over to SHERM, thereby granting SHERM the right to claim the article as part of its publishing proprietary corpus. Authors retain copyright credit for the article while SHERM becomes the sole publisher of the material. Because SHERM is a non-restrictive licensing publication, authors (as copyright owners of their research) are allowed to share and repost their article on any platform of their choosing.

As partners with SHERM, upon acceptance and publication of an article, authors are automatically granted the right to share, disseminate, use, and repost their article in any way they deem necessary to expand the visibility of their publication. Likewise, authors retain all intellectual property rights, including the specific research content and data employed throughout the article, as well as the right to retain attribution rights as the article's original creator and writer.

Licensing Transfer

As the sole licensee of all the articles, SHERM retains the exclusive right to publish, distribute, or transfer the license of an article to other third parties for private and commercial purposes. SHERM reserves the right to create and authorize the commercial use of all published articles.

In order to make the articles available to as many audiences and researchers as possible, SHERM reserves the right to post (and repost even after initial publication of) all articles in any form or media as allowable by the newest technological developments. Currently, this means SHERM will post all articles to numerous open access websites and social media platforms. SHERM also reserves the right to advertise the publication of any article through various mediums.

By transferring exclusive licensing rights to SHERM, authors agree to the following stipulations:

- Authors cannot republish their article (either in English or in another language) with a different academic journal (without express consent from SHERM).
- Authors who repost their article online must incorporate a citation that indicates SHERM as the publisher of the content (including a link to the original article on the SHERM website, as well as the volume and issue number).
- Authors who wish to use portions of the article for other publications or work must cite the original SHERM publication.
- SHERM is granted authorization to impose copyright infringements laws, as well as combat instances of plagiarism against third parties on behalf of the author(s).

No part of this journal or issue may be used, copied, or reproduced in any manner without written permission from the editors except in the case of brief quotations embodied in critical articles, reviews, and other scholarly publications. In accordance with the "fair use" agreement of Title 17 U.S.C. Section 107 of the US Copyright Act, the following permissions are granted for the express purposes of teaching, research, and scholarship: Reproduction—authors and readers can make multiple copies of individual articles without profit. Distribution—authors and readers can distribute and publicly display individual articles without profit. # Evidence-Based Analysis of English Texts Written on Jesus' Resurrection

Michael J. Alter,
Independent Researcher

Abstract: Since 2004, Gary Habermas has referenced his resurrection bibliography. Frequently, Habermas and Christian apologists assert that the scholarly consensus is that writers support the resurrection: a solid majority (about 75%) of scholars who have published books or articles on Jesus' resurrection accept the historicity of the empty tomb. However, Habermas has not presented supporting evidence for the past twenty years. This article collects and presents factual data and information about the authors of nonjuvenile, English-language texts, at least forty-eight pages written during the past 500 years on Jesus' resurrection. Significant categories of data investigated include (1) degree(s) earned and level of education, (2) occupation and interests, and (3) religion or denomination. Approximately 775 books (including six double-counted debates) were surveyed, with 713 pros and 62 contras. Pro authors were 610 and forty-six contras. The data substantiates and expands the earlier report by Alter and Slade. This article provides evidence that a remarkably high proportion of the English-language books written about Jesus' resurrection were by members of the clergy or people linked to seminaries and those having a professional and personal interest in the subject matter.

Introduction

In the past five centuries, over 700 English texts (non-juvenile), at least forty-eight pages, have been published about the resurrection of Jesus. Frequently, Christian apologists, commentators, and theologians present a common reframe that the scholarly consensus is that writers support the resurrection. Most notably, Gary R. Habermas claimed that a solid majority (about 75%) of scholars who have published books or articles on Jesus' resurrection accept the historicity of the empty tomb.<sup>1</sup> They cite a landmark 2005 article by Habermas as their evidentiary proof. In addition, afterward, Christian apologists, commentators, and theologians note a jointly published text by Habermas and Michael Licona: The Case for the Resurrection of Jesus.<sup>2</sup> In 2010, resurrection scholar Michael R. Licona published the highly acclaimed, modified version of his Ph.D. dissertation, The Resurrection of Jesus: A New Historiographical Approach. In Licona's introduction, he wrote, "Habermas has compiled a massive bibliography consisting of approximately 3,400 scholarly journal articles and books."<sup>3</sup> Two years later, Habermas published a widely influential article, particularly its allusion to a bibliography of 3400 sources.<sup>4</sup> Citations that mention Habermas's 3,400 references have appeared in various texts, journals, online articles, and podcasts.<sup>5</sup> Textual references include the works of Andrew Ter Ern Loke, Brian K. Morley, William A. Dembski and Michael R. Licona, Benjamin C. Shaw, and Robert B. Stewart.<sup>6</sup>

Surprisingly, an article by Michael Alter and Darren Slade reveals that if readers examine the authors who have published books in English on the topic of Jesus' resurrection, the seventy-five percent figure is, if anything, an underestimate.<sup>7</sup> Therefore, at first sight, this finding may seem to support the Christian apologist's claim of a solid scholarly consensus in favor of the empty tomb and Jesus' resurrection.

In 2021, Alter and Slade co-published "Dataset Analysis of English Texts Written on the Topic of Jesus' Resurrection: A Statistical Critique of Minimal Facts Apologetics." They confirmed, digging deeper; however, a different picture emerged. Their article "reveals that a remarkably high proportion of the English-language books written about Jesus' resurrection were by members of the clergy or people linked to seminaries. The data means any so-called scholarly consensus on the subject of Jesus' resurrection is wildly inflated due to a biased sample of authors who have a professional and personal interest in the subject matter."<sup>8</sup> Moreover, the data confirmed that "Pro-Resurrection authors outnumber Contra-Resurrection authors by a factor of <sup>5</sup> Readers must note that Habermas's forthcoming text expands his working bibliography to about 4,500.

In contrast, Michael J. Alter's forthcoming text, The Resurrection and Its Apologetics Vol. 1 strongly challenges the Minimal Facts approach to Jesus' resurrection.

about twelve-to-one. (Italics added for emphasis) However, their article did not provide evidentiary proof substantiating its findings.

In other words, most books on the resurrection are by committed Christians. “We may legitimately presume that most of them already accepted the historicity of Jesus’ resurrection long before they became scholars.”<sup>9</sup> Indeed, apologist Gregory Koukl admits that most apologists first came to faith through personal experiences, not evidence.<sup>10</sup>

Frequently and sensibly, detractors and skeptics criticize Habermas because, during the past twenty years or so, he does not provide data supporting his claims. Alter’s future text, The Resurrection and Its Apologetics Volume 2, devotes a section on that topic disputing the claim. A notable critic voicing equal concern is Richard Carrier.<sup>11</sup> Noteworthy, they and others seek to know who these people are who have written about the resurrection. More precisely, several questions include missing minimal facts about the authors: (1) level of education and degree of expertise (profession or layperson), (2) experience and professional service, and (3) religion or denomination.

Alter, in 2020 published, A Thematic Access Oriented Bibliography on the Resurrection of Jesus’s Resurrection. That essential reference text organized more than 7,000 English sources into twelve main categories and subcategories, designed to help researchers find the most relevant literature quickly and efficiently. Returning to Alter and Slade, their abstract reads:

This article collects and examines data relating to the authors of English-language texts written and published during the past 500 years on the subject of Jesus’ resurrection and then compares this data to Gary R. Habermas’ 2005 and 2012 publication on the subject. To date, there has been no such inquiry. This present article identifies 735 texts spanning five centuries (from approximately 1500 to 2020). The data reveals 680 Pro-Resurrection books by 601 authors (204 by ministers, 146 by priests, 249

<sup>9</sup> This is, in fact, the case with apologist Gary Habermas, who regularly shares stories with his students about being a committed Christian in his youth long before obtaining a college degree. As fellow apologist John Frame once observed, “Habermas in the end presupposes a Christian view of evidence and probability” (Frame, “A Presuppositionalist’s Response,” 137). Quote from Alter and Slade, “Dataset Analysis,” 368 n2.

<sup>10</sup> Koukl, Tactics, 55. Tony Campolo also confesses, “My apologetic, I explained, was determined by an a priori commitment. I believed first, then constructed arguments to support what I believed....In the end, isn’t what we believe more highly contingent upon decisions we make rather than on empirical evidence?” (McLaren and Campolo, Adventures in Missing the Point, 108).

by people associated with seminaries, 70 by laypersons, and 22 by women). This article also reveals that a remarkably high proportion of the English-language books written about Jesus' resurrection were by members of the clergy or people linked to seminaries, which means any so-called scholarly consensus on the subject of Jesus' resurrection is wildly inflated due to a biased sample of authors who have a professional and personal interest in the subject matter. Pro-Resurrection authors outnumber Contra-Resurrection authors by a factor of about twelve-to-one. In contrast, the 55 Contra-Resurrection books, representing 7.48% of the total 735 books, were by 42 authors (28 having no relevant degrees at the time of publication). The 42 contra authors represent only 6.99% of all authors writing on the subject.<sup>12</sup>

Although the Alter-Slade article presented first-time data about the authors of 735 English texts on the resurrection, it lacked crucial information that researchers require. Like Habermas, it did not present supporting information about the 601 pro-resurrection and 42 con-resurrection authors. Those deficiencies require acknowledging and engaging. For example, in the abstract, they write that of the 680 Pro-Resurrection books by 601 authors, 204 were written by ministers, 146 by priests, and 249 by people associated with seminaries.<sup>13</sup>

Importantly, this article provides information about the authors' credibility and potential biases from both sides of the religious aisle, exposing the likelihood of a confirmation bias among credentialed true believers who conclude something they already believed: God raised Jesus from the dead.<sup>14</sup> This article engages and interacts with Habermas's claims and the deficiencies in the Alter-Slade article. Furthermore, it provides missing facts demanded by biblical scholars, detractors, and skeptics.

Aim of This Article

This article aims to collect and present factual data and information about the authors of English-language texts written and published during the past 500 years on Jesus' resurrection. Categories of data investigated include (1) degree(s) and level of education, (2) experience and occupation, (3) and religion or denomination. The text must be English, nonjuvenile, and at least forty-eight pages.<sup>15</sup>

This article employs several variables. They are visible in the seven-column spreadsheet seen in Table 1, 3, and 4.

1. The text number (first number) and author or editor book number (seen in parenthesis).<sup>16</sup>
2. Author or editor's name.
3. Name of the text.<sup>17</sup>
4. The year the text was published.
5. Identification of (a) the degree(s) earned by the author, (b) the specific discipline(s) that the degree(s) related to (e.g., apologetics, history, ministry, philosophy, religious studies, theology), (c) the institution obtained from, and (d) whether the author was a layperson.<sup>18</sup>
6. A brief overview of the author's (a) nationality, (b) occupation (e.g., bishop, evangelist, minister, priest, professor), (c) experience, professional service, and (d) interest are visible to inspect.
7. The author's denomination or religion. (see Table 1)

<sup>15</sup> Readers must be mindful that the number of pages in a published text is misleading. Publishers employ varying fonts, the gutter (The gutter of a book is the blank space where the left and right pages meet), and the top and bottom margins (Margins are the blank spaces found between the content and the edge of the page.), and the size of the text (e.g., 8 X 11, 8 X 12, 5 X 8, 6 X 9).

<sup>18</sup> Frequently, when information was lacking, column 5 provides only a general description or listing about where the author obtained an education (Seminary/College/University).

Review of the Literature

A Southeastern Theological Review (Summer 2012) journal issue devoted extensive pages to Jesus' resurrection. In one article, "The Minimal Facts Approach to the Resurrection of Jesus," Habermas further clarified and illuminated the nature of his research.

From the outset of my studies, I argued that there were at least two major prerequisites for an occurrence to be designated as a Minimal Fact. Each event had to be established by more than adequate scholarly evidence, and usually by several critically-ascertained, independent lines of argumentation. Additionally, the vast majority of contemporary scholars in relevant fields had to acknowledge the historicity of the occurrence (italics added). Of the two criteria, I have always held that the first is by far the most crucial, especially since this initial requirement is the one that actually establishes the historicity of the event. Besides, the acclamation of scholarly opinion may be mistaken or it could change....

Habermas elaborates about an important phrase: "the vast majority." Synonymously, the phrase "virtually all scholars" appears in the literature, interviews, and podcasts. Notably, he writes, "At least when referencing the most important historical occurrences, I frequently think in terms of a ninety-something percentile head-count (italics added)." Habermas explains why this information is crucial: "No doubt, this is one of the reasons why the concept has gained some attention."

Next, he describes his catalog stating "My bibliography is presently at about 3400 sources and counting, published originally in French, German, or English." The bibliography includes

1. Skeptical to liberal to conservative spectrum
2. Well-known and obscure writers
3. Authors who did not have specialized scholarly credentials or peer-reviewed publications

Habermas estimates that "The result of all these years of study is a private manuscript of more than 600 pages." Afterward, he candidly acknowledges "Most of this material is unpublished, though I have released some of the results in essays that specifically attempt to provide overviews of some of these current academic positions.<sup>19</sup>

The reader will note that Habermas listed two criteria for designating an event relating to Jesus' death and resurrection as a minimal fact: (1) the event is well-evidenced (usually for several reasons), and (2) the event is generally believed to have occurred by at least 90% of "critical scholars." This article, similar to Alter and Slade, will take no issue with Habermas's first criterion, only with his second. Briefly stated Habermas's research fails to satisfy his second criterion. Further, the standard itself needs to be modified to distinguish between a scholar's pre-conceived beliefs about Jesus and their subsequent opinions from academic research.<sup>20</sup> Moreover, it requires inquiring, "Where's the beef?"

Lack of Details about Scholars

There are numerous unanswered questions about Habermas's list of scholars who accept the empty tomb. Habermas needs to provide his readers with substantive details about these scholars. The following questions about his claims require answers:

- What is Habermas's definition of a "critical scholar" or a "scholar"? He does not define or elaborate on the difference between these terms.
- Which and how many of these writers are scholars?
- Which and how many of these scholars are, respectively, from German, French, or English-speaking nations or elsewhere?
- Which and how many of these scholars are Christians, Evangelical Christians, Christian apologists, Jewish, Muslims, agnostics, or atheists?
- Which and how many of these writers were New Testament scholars, historians, philosophers, rabbis, imams, or laypeople?

<sup>20</sup> Slade a former doctoral student of Habermas, in the Alter-Slade article, provides insight. He says, "Habermas himself has stated that being criticized for his obstinate ideological dogmatism is simply part of the persecution that all true Christians should expect. When confronted with the notion that the 'minimal facts' tactic can only compile data and that it is his religious ideology interpreting the data in favor of Christianity, Habermas agreed. He simply concluded that everyone engages in a confirmation bias (Habermas, "APOL 900," May 26, 2016). See Alter and Slade, "Data Set Analysis," 372n9.

- Which and how many of these scholars are qualified experts in relevant fields such as biblical studies or ancient history?
- Which and how many of these scholars signed letters promising they would not reject various tenets of their faith?
- Which and how many scholars are ministers, pastors, priests, vicars, seminary instructors, Christian apologists, or missionaries?
- Which and how many of these works are scholarly publications and peer-reviewed?

Investigative Obstacles, Presuppositions, and Methodology

Alter reexamined approximately 700 sources in subcategories 1 and 2.<sup>21</sup> Reexamination aimed to determine texts for removal from Alter's original lists. Added to the original lists were newly published texts, forthcoming publications, and discovered older sources.

Investigative Obstacles

Readers are reminded from the Alter-Slade article that an exhaustive list of all texts ever written about Jesus' resurrection would consist of sources written in all languages, in all locales, and at any time since the birth of Christianity. However, due to time constraints, geography, accessibility, and limited research resources, an alternative was required to narrow the search. Consequently, this investigation only incorporates a nearly complete dataset of nonjuvenile English-language texts, at least forty-eight pages, arranged in Pro-Resurrection (Table 3) and Contra-Resurrection (Table 4). These texts, in turn, are sorted into seven columns.

Another obstacle was whether to single-count texts that consist of debates (whether to list the book exclusively by the first name of the debater appearing in the text and that person's category: pro or contra.). Six books were debates. An alternative approach was adopted. It incorporates listing both debaters in their respective pro or contra position. Consequently, the total number of texts lacks exactitude.

Organization

This article focuses on several variables for presentation to answer the crucial question: “Where’s the beef?”:

- (1) Author’s name;
- (2) Year of the published work(s);
- (3) Identification of (a) the degree(s) earned by the author, (b) the specific discipline(s) that the degree(s) related to (e.g., apologetics, history, ministry, philosophy), (c) the institution obtained from, and (d) whether the author was a layperson or a scholar;
- (4) A brief overview of the author’s (a) nationality, (b) religion, and (c) occupation (e.g., bishop, evangelist, minister, priest, professor), and
- (5) The author’s denomination or religion.

This information was primarily, although not exclusively, gathered through eight sources: (1) the book(s) written by the author; (2) the publisher; (3) the author’s curriculum vitae; (4) published biographies; (5) encyclopedias; (6) the Library of Congress Name Authority File (NAF); (7) LinkedIn; and (8) obituary notices.

Inclusions and Exclusions

This study is limited to non-juvenile texts (at least forty-eight pages) written exclusively in English and penned primarily within the past five centuries.<sup>22</sup> It

<sup>22</sup> The search was limited deliberately to the English language for five major reasons. First, from Alter’s 2021 text, a healthy amount of data from approximately 700 texts was easily accessible. In contrast, Habermas’s total of 3,400 sources included journal articles. His forthcoming text (On the Resurrection: Evidences, p. 2) says resurrection bibliography “currently standing at some 4,500 sources.” Second, Habermas has never provided data detailing precisely how many texts (not articles) he analyzed were exclusively English, meaning the number of non-English texts may not have been statistically significant. Third, it is noteworthy that Habermas said, “By far, the majority of publications on the subject of Jesus’ death and resurrection have been written by North American authors”; thus, presumably in the English language. Of note, thirty-two pro and only four con books in Alter’s bibliography were English translations from other languages. Fourth, if this study incorporated non-English texts, there would be the question of which languages would be subject to exclusion and for what reason. Significantly, including only French and German titles (as Habermas does) while excluding Arabic would skew the data since Islam rejects the historicity of Jesus’ crucifixion. Moreover, it is noteworthy that Habermas excludes other languages like Korean, Chinese, and Spanish. How can he claim that “most scholars” agree on a minimal fact if “most” scholars are actually excluded from his list? Five, excludes texts about the Christ Myth (Jesus never existed). It also excludes resurrection texts that focus on the spiritual and theological meaning of the presumed events. One additional limitation was incomplete information about several authors.<sup>23</sup>

This article divides the data findings into two main categories: Pro (Table 3) and Contra (Table 4). The purpose of this division is to facilitate the examination of the data. However, the existence of more nuanced groupings is acknowledged.

Alter and Slade, and this article also examines the religious denomination and clerical status. These variables continued to present numerous obstacles to arriving at an accurate tabulation. For example:

1. Several authors changed their denominational affiliation, while overall categorization was difficult, if not impossible, for others.
2. Some members of the clergy employed various terms for their occupation. Often, this fact made it impossible to determine their denomination accurately.

Who Counts as a Scholar?

To be categorized as a “scholar” in the field, at least two obvious problems exist.

1. What is the definition of a critical scholar?
2. What are the relevant credentials for qualifications?

What is Habermas’s definition of a critical scholar or a scholar? He does not define or elaborate on the difference between these terms. In 2017, one reader asked Bart Ehrman, can biblical scholars be historians? He responded, “I would say that most biblical scholars in fact are not historians. But some are. It depends on what their interests and expertise are.”<sup>24</sup> Habermas, in his forthcoming texts partially lends credence to Ehrman’s opinion, “If a scholar has an accredited although limited to the English language, this data is not of limited value because it exposes serious defects in Habermas’s apologetic methodology. Of course, the implications of this study should be subject to further investigation. Specifically, future research should build on this paper and investigate findings in non-English language texts, as well as journal articles. Collectively, they would present researchers with deeper insight into the writers of texts on this critical topic.

<sup>23</sup> Readers must be cognizant of the subjectivity about categorizing, including, and excluding resurrection texts.

terminal degree in the area being discussed, that would most likely qualify them.”<sup>25</sup>

Tim McGrew, Ph.D., Philosophy, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Philosophy at Western Michigan University, and Christian apologist says:

An advanced degree is indirect evidence that you know what you are talking about. It is useful as far as it goes. But indirect evidence must give way in the presence of direct evidence. Show me that you know what you are talking about, and I don't care whether you have the degree. Show me that you *don't* know what you are talking about, and I don't care whether you have the degree.<sup>26</sup>

An example is Lydia McGrew, Tim's wife. She describes herself: “I am a wife, mother, emeritus home schooler and scholar ... As a scholar, I'm an analytic philosopher with a fairly hefty publication record in such areas as testimony, independence, probability theory, etc. More recently my work has extended to New Testament studies.”<sup>27</sup> Presumably, credentialed detractors might claim she is unqualified to write in apologetics, philosophy, or theology. Lydia McGrew has one of the sharpest minds in these disciplines and can probably dance circles around those touted credentialed with a Ph.D. It is best to examine her literary output. It speaks for itself.

Several examples of writers of texts, chapters in texts, journal articles, and blog posts illuminate this point.

1. Richard Swinburne earned a Ph.D. in Philosophy from Oxford.
2. Lee Strobel is the former award-winning legal editor of The Chicago Tribune and an honorary doctorate recipient.
3. Matthew McGrew earned a Ph.D. in Philosophy from Vanderbilt University.
4. Pamela Binnings Ewen earned a Juris Doctor in Law.
5. James Patrick Holding earned an M.A. in Library Science.

6. Gilbert R. Lavoie earned an M.D. in Internal Medicine and Occupational Medicine.
7. James Warner Wallace was a former Homicide Detective.
8. Greg Laurie does not have any formal seminary training.

Readers must diligently examine the authors' credentials provided in Table 3 and Table 4. At first appearance, a significant number, from those on both sides of the religious aisle, appear to possess credentials. Are these writers qualified to write a text, chapter in a text, or journal article about the resurrection?

A Doctor of Divinity (D. Div.) is an honorary degree conferred upon select professionals who have demonstrated an outstanding commitment to ministry and theology. In other words, a doctorate in divinity differs from a degree one receives after taking a course of college classes and completing a dissertation. In contrast, some writers have a D.D. or Ph.D. in religion and theology attached to their names. Wikipedia cites an example:

Billy Graham, who received honorary Doctor of Divinity degrees from The King's College and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was regularly addressed as "Dr. Graham", though his highest earned degree was a Bachelor of Arts degree in anthropology from Wheaton College.<sup>28</sup>

Detractors may, in humorous sarcasm, remind readers that the three letters of Ph.D. are an acronym:

1. Permanent head damage
2. Piled higher and deeper
3. Push here for dummies
4. Please hide dangerous
5. Probability hypothesis density

The crucial question is whether the D.D. (Doctor of Divinity) or Ph.D. qualifies writers to write a text about the resurrection. The reader must be the final judge.

Research by Alter (2020) and this article confirmed that several authors had a "doctorate," but the degree was an honorary title. Examples of non-degree authors include Horace M. Du Bose, Curtis Hutson, Greg Laurie, A.A. Lipscomb, Lee Strobel, and Warren Wiersbe. These writers are in good company. For example, Lewis Sperry Chafer, founder and president of Dallas Theological Seminary and the author of his eight-volume Systematic Theology, only received three honorary degrees, one that he gave himself. Similarly, Joel Osteen, a celebrity American lay preacher, televangelist, and prominent figure associated with prosperity theology, did not receive a degree from a divinity school. Nevertheless, he has millions of followers and readers.

One realistic response is that the degree earned is irrelevant. What matters is whether the book is:

1. Truthful.
2. Factual (i.e., it presents facts, not “alternative facts”).
3. It cites “substantial” peer-reviewed evidence supporting its findings and interpretations.
4. Engages and interacts with ideas, pros, and cons about the resurrection.
5. Presents a broad scope about the resurrection (discussing numerous topics, authors, agendas, dating, apologetics, controversial issues, and current discussion.).
6. Depth of insight and knowledge.
7. Can withstand critical analysis.
8. Frankly admits when it is presenting an argument from silence.

Data

Before, Alter and Slade provided a detailed analysis of English texts about the resurrection.<sup>29</sup> A reduced summary of this (Alter’s) article follows. Note that categories overlap. They do not add up to the total. (see Table 2)

1. Number of Pro-Resurrection Books
2. Number of Pro-Resurrection Authors
3. Number of Contra-Resurrection Books

Conclusion

Actress Clara Pelle asked the famous question, “Where’s the beef?” In theology, the question that requires answering is where is the beef supporting Habermas’s claims? It requires remembering that Gary Habermas’s publications report that he has identified roughly 3,400 resurrection sources. Moreover, he elaborated that they were (1) published from 1975 to 2010; (2) books and journal articles; and (3) in English, French, and German. His research found that a 3:1 ratio (75%) of scholars accepted the empty tomb, and an even higher percentage endorsed other minimal facts about the resurrection. Looking at the data another way, Habermas is saying that at least 25 percent of authors or scholars reject the empty tomb as a fact. In contrast, research by Alter differs from that of Habermas in several ways. His investigation incorporated (1) exclusively nonjuvenile English-language materials; (2) texts at least forty-eight pages; and (3) books written in the past five centuries.

This investigation analyzed approximately 775 texts (including six double-counted debates), with 713 pros and 62 contras. Pro authors were 610 and forty-six contras. The data substantiates and expands the earlier report by Alter and Slade. This article provides evidence that a remarkably high proportion of the English-language books written about Jesus’ resurrection were by members of the clergy or people linked to seminaries and those having a professional and personal interest in the subject matter.

Material from the Alter and Slade article bears repeating:

A remarkably high proportion of the books written about Jesus’ resurrection were by members of the clergy or people linked to seminaries, which means any so-called scholarly consensus on the subject of Jesus’ resurrection is wildly inflated due to a biased sample of authors who have a professional and personal interest in the subject matter. No doubt that the same holds true for journal article publications, as well. Pro-Resurrection authors outnumber Contra-Resurrection authors by a factor of about twelve-to-one. (Italics for emphasis)

This investigation substantiates assertions that Christians of various denominations write the vast majority of texts published on Jesus' resurrection. This review determined that virtually all of the Pro-Resurrection Christian authors are, in fact, "true believers" with pre-critical and occupational biases in favor of orthodox Christian dogma. A literature review of the source confirms that many of the authors are apologists, evangelists, ministers, priests, or administrators and professors in theological seminaries and universities. Consequently, the vast majority likely have a vested interest in the outcome of their research, something Habermas himself warns against.

By now, the flaw in the second criterion listed in Habermas's 2005 and 2012 articles should be apparent to the reader. Habermas's numbers merely expose the likelihood of a confirmation bias among credentialed "true believers" who conclude something that they already believed to begin with: Jesus raised from the dead. The data that Habermas has amassed is not proportionately pulled from all relevant subclasses of critical scholarship and is, therefore, unrepresentative of the actual historio-theological landscape. The data Habermas has gathered is not only tainted by virtue of his own professional biases (data gathered by advocacy groups like Christian apologetic institutions).

The data in this article provides evidentiary proof that most authors of pro-resurrection texts have a vested interest in the outcome. Returning to Alter and Slade,

That said, this article does not wish to assert that a Christian scholar cannot write an objective and critical text on the topic of Jesus' resurrection. Indeed, a literature review found that several detractors were once Christians, and some were former "believers" who later deconverted. Conversely, a review of the literature shows that some non-Christians and marginal Christians alike have converted or become stronger believers ("more mature in their faith") in Christianity after a deeper inquiry into the subject.<sup>33</sup>

Clara Pelle was correct to inquire angrily, “Where’s the beef?” Biblical scholars, theologians, and detractors are equally spot-on when they indigently ask Habermas to provide his evidence. For almost twenty years, they have made requests to examine the data. This article provides beef and kosher at that.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Michael J. Alter taught in the Miami-Dade County Public School System for over forty years. He published The Name Israel (2023) and A Thematic Access-Oriented Bibliography of Jesus's Resurrection with Resource Publications (2020). His 602-page text identified approximately 7,000 English-language sources from books on that subject. Five years earlier, he penned The Resurrection: A Critical Inquiry (2015) and has assisted in editing several other texts. Alter has also published with Jason Aronson, Why the Torah Begins with the Letter Beit (1998) and What Is The Purpose Of Creation? A Jewish Anthology (1991). Both books were the main selection of "The Jewish Book Club." Forthcoming is The Resurrection and Its Apologetics: Jesus' Death and Burial.
